PAUL M. DODYK

FELLOWSHIP FOR ECONOMIC JUSTICE

FELLOWSHIP DESCRIPTION

The newly created Paul M. Dodyk Fellowship for Economic Justice at the National Center for Law and Economic Justice (NCLEJ) honors longtime NCLEJ Board Chair Paul Dodyk for his lifetime commitment to using the law to promote fair and dignified treatment for everyone in our society, regardless of their means. The Fellowship is an exciting opportunity to honor Paul, a lifelong advocate for those in need, while helping to carry out his vision for a more just world.

The Dodyk Fellowship will support the legal efforts of recent law school graduates and greatly enhance NCLEJ's capacity to serve those who have the least in our society. The campaign for the Paul M. Dodyk Economic Justice Fellowship seeks substantial contributions sufficient to assure Dodyk Fellows for many years to come.

PROFILE OF PAUL M. DODYK

The son of Ukrainian immigrants who worked for the car companies, Paul was born in Hamtramck, Michigan. He received a B.A. summa cum laude from Amherst College in 1959, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. After college, he became a Rhodes Scholar and received a B.Phil with honors from Oxford University in 1961. From there, he went to Harvard Law School where he graduated magna cum laude in 1964 and was an editor of the Law Review.

After graduation from Harvard Law School, Paul served as a clerk for Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart. From 1965 to 1971, Paul was a professor at Columbia Law School, where he wrote the first case book on Law and Poverty. While he was at Columbia, Paul became the Faculty Director of the Center on Social Welfare Policy and Law, which is now the National Center for Law and Economic Justice.

Under Paul's leadership, NCLEJ won a number of major Supreme Court cases, including the seminal case of Goldberg v. Kelly, which established a due process right to a fair hearing before benefits could be terminated.

Paul joined Cravath, Swaine & Moore in 1969 and became a litigation partner in 1973. At Cravath, from which he recently retired, Paul had a distinguished career trying cases for companies such as General Motors, IBM and PPG. He also served as Secretary to the Second Circuit Judicial Conference.

Paul returned to NCLEJ and joined its Board in 1997. From 1999 to 2010, he served as Chair, and continues to serve as an active member of the Board. During Paul's tenure, NCLEJ broadened its base of support, enabling it to operate independently of the government as a source of funds.

Paul has also served as Chair of the Board of Trustees of Americans for Oxford, the U.S. fundraising arm of Oxford University; as a member of the Advisory Board of the Oxford Centre for Socio-Legal Research; as Executive Secretary of the District III Rhodes Scholarship Selection Committee; as Chair of the Oxford Study of the Social Contract in the Twenty-First Century; as a Trustee of the Cranbrook Schools, Bloomfield Hills, Michigan; and as a Trustee of the Oxford Martin School.

■ NATIONAL CENTER FOR LAW AND ECONOMIC JUSTICE

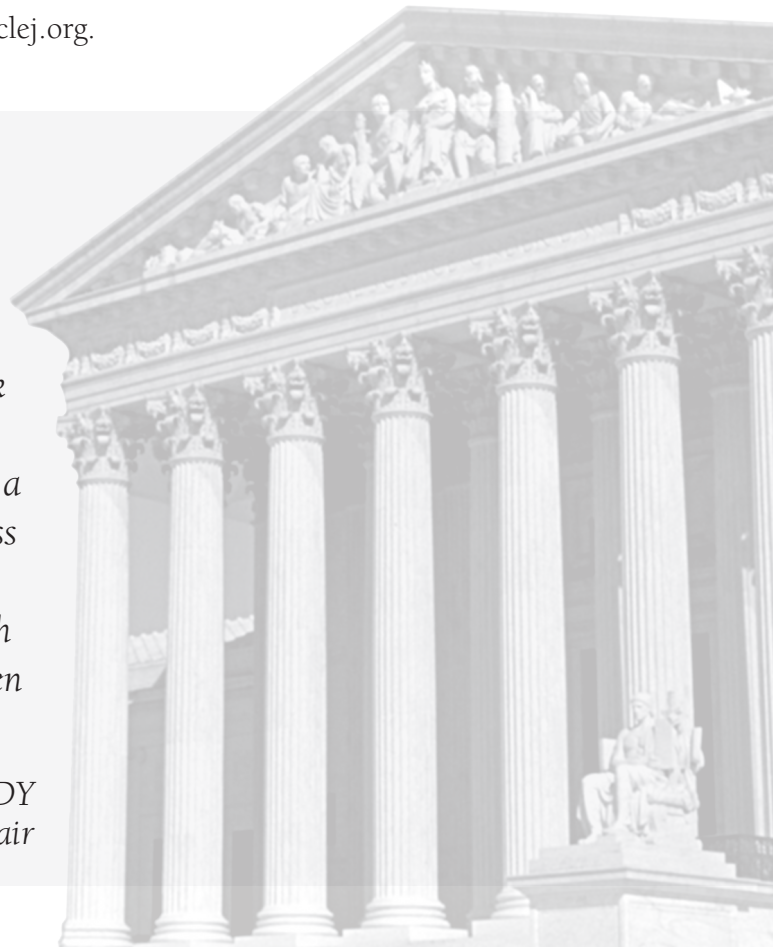

NCLEJ, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, was founded in 1965, in the heyday of the civil rights movement. From the very start, NCLEJ joined with civil rights lawyers in landmark cases, worked with community-based organizations around the country and won ground breaking victories in the courts, while committing resources to bring about legislative reform. Through these early successes, NCLEJ demonstrated that the law can be a powerful instrument for improving the lives of the most disadvantaged members of our society simply by requiring governmental agencies to comply with the law.

For the past 46 years, NCLEJ has led the way in promoting economic justice, fairness and opportunity for those in need and safeguarding important legal and constitutional rights. NCLEJ has done so in the face of a constantly changing legal, social and political environment, marked by a shift in authority over social programs from the federal to the state and local levels and increased privatization of public benefits administration.

NCLEJ's staff of award-winning attorneys and policy advocates has many years of experience, and NCLEJ multiplies the impact of its staff by asking major law firms, as well as civil rights, civil liberties, and other legal advocacy organizations to serve as co-counsel. NCLEJ staff excel at forging new partnerships by educating other advocates about emerging issues and advocacy strategies, presenting at conferences, convening groups of advocates over critical issues, disseminating publications, and expanding the use of its national listservs. More information on NCLEJ can be found at www.nclej.org.

“Paul Dodyk is a teacher, a practitioner, and a friend of the highest caliber. In the study of education and morality, the founder of Philips Exeter Academy is oft-quoted for saying ‘goodness without knowledge is weak and feeble, yet knowledge without goodness is dangerous.’ Paul is a shining example of a lawyer who combines the virtues of goodness and knowledge. He has used his sharp intellect and the riches afforded him through education to do immense good for those often scorned or forgotten by the rest of society.”

MAJOR FELLOWSHIP SUPPORT OPPORTUNITIES

While gifts of any amount are welcome and appreciated, we highlight below several special support opportunities. We will also be pleased to discuss opportunities for multi-year or planned giving support.

In addition to the benefits outlined below, supporters of the Fellowship at the $1,000 level or higher will have the opportunity to meet regularly with current and past Fellows to learn about their ongoing work and aspirations.

Major supporters will also be invited to informal meetings with NCLEJ's staff of experts to share ideas about NCLEJ's efforts to advance economic justice.

Paul Dodyk will be honored at NCLEJ's annual awards dinner on May 26, 2011. As outlined below, participation in the dinner is an optional benefit of supporting the Fellowship Campaign.
